Hi Anna,

So I can delete the end and change some of this text, but no we can't use "NCEA" because we are required to say "EPA"... otherwise this is done.

That being said, by posting it, the public has access to the document and they can start reading it...they just don't have a place to deposit their comments....which is why we can't 'invite' them to comment. We can only make it available for their viewing. So, Maureen, can you revert the website to the place you were after Anna asked you to change? And let us look at it?

I'm certainly not an expert in the docket protocols.

If the FR notice serves as the technical start of the public comment period then we will have many fewer days for the "official" public comment period.

So it goes. I think the legal minimum is 15 days for public comment.

John,

The issue is that the docket is open, but the ISA is not posted to the docket yet and won't be until the FR is published. So technically, the public comment has not begun...commenters have nowhere to put their comments. That is the reason to revise the language for now. Does this make sense?

Wait - don't change - the docket is available; it has been for some time. This is our docket for production of the ISA. This is Not the SAB docket.

Look here: <https://www.regulations.gov/docket?D=EPA-HQ-ORD-2014-0859>

John,

Anna noticed that the page was referring to 'availability' for public comment. But the docket is not open yet, right? And FR is not out. SO, she is working with Maureen to remove that phrase until the FR posts? The ISA is still there and accessible. Thanks Maureen and Anna.
